DALLAS, TX — A delegation of senior Ukrainian military leaders will visit Dallas from October 12–14 as guests of the Ukrainian Freedom Fund (UFF). The visit offers North Texas civic, business, and community leaders a rare, direct line to active-duty officers navigating the frontlines of the war.

The delegation features high-level commanders and General Staff officers with extensive combat experience, alongside former defense leaders and UFF's Kyiv-based leadership team.

This visit follows UFF's annual Strategic Leadership Forum, which pairs Ukrainian military minds with senior U.S. military and national security professionals. Together, they analyze hard-earned lessons from the war, address emerging battlefield challenges, and map out strategic adaptations.

UFF is a U.S.-based 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization that has championed Ukraine since Russia's initial invasion in 2014. Working in tandem with the Armed Forces of Ukraine, UFF strengthens institutional capacity, sharpens leadership development, and supplies critical non-lethal assistance. To date, more than 4,000 Ukrainian military leaders have advanced through UFF-supported programs.

"Technology is changing warfare at an extraordinary pace, and Ukraine has demonstrated a remarkable ability to innovate and adapt," said Andrew Bain, CEO and founder of the Ukrainian Freedom Fund. "But technology by itself does not create an effective military. Leaders and organizations determine how effectively those capabilities are employed. We take tremendous pride in the trust the Armed Forces of Ukraine have placed in UFF and in the opportunity to work alongside Ukrainian leaders as they strengthen their military for both the challenges they face today and those they will face in the future."

Throughout the three-day Dallas visit, local leaders will gain firsthand insights into how the conflict is evolving and what it takes to sustain Ukraine's fight for freedom.
